The Man Who Wins

By Clara Bushnell Castle.

It is not so much the thing which is done,
That counts for a man in the winning;
But how much more of a man, is the man
In the end, than in the beginning.

The man who wins, is the man who stays
In the race, in spite of the odds;
The strength of men is a man's always,
But the victor's, is a man's plus God's.

Weddings and Parties In Honor Of El Paso Brides

The "clothes pin" shower given by Miss Nell Pollard Saturday afternoon at the Country club in honor of Miss Lillian Austin, was marked by an originality that rendered it particularly charming.

At the close of the bridge games which preceded the shower the curtains to the rest room were drawn aside, disclosing a line upon which hung everything that could be dear to the heart of a prospective bride. The "shower" very strongly resembled a deluge. The various colored clothes pins which held the presents were collected and put into a bag for the younger women of the party to draw. The white pin signified the next bride, while the one drawing the gold pin would marry for wealth, and the green pin indicated the old maid of the party.

In the bridge games Mrs. A. P. Coles and Miss Ethel White won the prizes. The tally cards were in plain white, bearing the hostess's monogram. The table was in the form of a hollow square and the decoration effect was particularly pleasing.

The central table held a large basket of pink and white sweet peas. The basket handle was tied with an immense bow of white tulle, from which long streamers ran through the center of the table to flower-filled baskets at either end.

Strewn over the tulle in graceful abandon was a profusion of pink and white sweet peas and ferns.

The bridal chair occupied by Miss Austin was decorated with white sweet peas and draped with white tulle and ribbon. The attractive place cards held the figure of a bride, hand-painted in watercolors. A delicious two course luncheon was served.

Among those in attendance were Mesdames James I. Marr, Lamar Davis, W. D. Wise, Charles Pomeroy, Isabel Flato, A. P. Coles, Winchester Cooley, Frank Coles, Otis Coles, F. J. Feldman, W. W. Turney, M.
